Or night kept chain'd below. Shakespeare's Tempest.

FOU

- I have founder'd nine score and odd posts; and here, travel-lainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville of the Dale, a most furious knight;
but what of that? he saw me and yielded. Shakef. Henry IV.
Thy stumbling founder'd jade can trot as high
As any other Pegasus can fly;
So the dull eel moves nimbler in the mud,
Than all the swift-swim'd racers of the flood. Dorset.
Brutes find out where their talents lie:
A bear will not attempt to fly;
A founder'd horse will oft debate,
Before he tries a five-bar'd gate. Swift.
If you find a gentleman fond of your horse, persuade your master to sell him, because he is vicious, and founder'd into the bargain. Swift's Directions to the Groom.
Men of discretion, whom people in power may with little ceremony load as heavy as they please, drive them through the hardest and deepest roads, without danger of foundering or breaking their backs, and will be sure to find them neither rely nor vicious. Swift.

figures are formed of melted metal; a castinghouse.
FOUNDLING. n. f. [from found of find.] A child exposed to chance; a child found without any parent or owner.
We, like bastards, are laid abroad, even as foundlings, to be trained up by grief and sorrow. Sidney.
I pass the foundling by, a race unknown,
At doors expos'd, whom matrons make their own,
And into noble families advance
A nameless issue; the blind work of chance. Dryd. Juven.
I shall mention a piece of charity which is practised by most of the nations about us: I mean a provision for foundlings, or for those children who, for want of such a provision, are exposed to the barbarity of cruel and unnatural parents. Addison.
The goddess long had mark'd the child's distress,
And long had fought his suff'rings to redress;
She prays the gods to take the foundling's part,
To teach his hands some beneficial art
Practis'd in streets. Gay's Trivia.
FOUNDERESS. n. f. [from founder.]
1. A woman that founds, builds, establishes, or begins any thing.
